Lesson Title: Peer Review 2 (actually 3, but who's counting??)

Today's lesson started with my sharing some of your answers from last week's feedback form. We found out how common your childhoods were! We continued with a free write on what's on your mind followed by a partner discussion, then a group discussion.

Then we moved on to the Peer Review of our reaction essay. Judging from the group conversation, it was a good experience for you. I really appreciate how you created a non-judgemental, supportive space for sharing your work.

I was also very impressed with how some of you did the Peer Review last week on your own. Well done! Once you know the magic of the peer review, you never go back to submitting writing without having someone else look it over.

I hope you enjoyed the reading for this week. I added two more chapters for next week but you can always read ahead. I look forward to discussing it with you.

I gave you a deadline of DECEMBER 2, 2022 to submit your two longer essays. You can hold on to the Tiny love story for now. Some of you shared your drafts on the feedback form for the Tiny Love Lesson, and if you haven't, it's never too late to go back and do that.

Your Homework:

1. Revise your essays based on feedback from the Peer Reviews. Submit by December 2, 2022
2. Read chapters 4-5 in The Elements of Academic Style by Eric Hayot.

3. Be ready to discuss the first 5 chapters of his book next week!

Finally, here is the feedback form for today's class.

Please take a moment and fill it out!

Thank you! See you next week.
