E-mail: drossi@units.it

Classes coming up: 2nd semester

CFU: 9; 60 hours

Course contents:

The Course is composed of 60 hours, and aims to provide, starting from the historical and juridical Roman experience, the essential knowledge to grasp the evolution of the European legal and cultural culture of the Medieval and Modern Age. Attending students (according to the methods of attendance register that will be expounded during the first meetings) will be offered – as a methodological key to legal phenomenology – a purely historic approach, which is the fundamental technical and training tool for understanding and knowingly utilizing current arrangements of contemporary law.

Readings:

Non attending students: AA.VV., Tempi del diritto. Età medievale, moderna e contemporanea, Torino, Giappichelli, 2022, dal cap. I al cap. IV; P. GROSSI, L'Europa del diritto, Roma-Bari, Laterza, latest edition on the market.

Attending students: in addition to the class notes and in-depth material provided by the teaching staff during classes, AA.VV., Tempi del diritto. Età medievale, moderna e contemporanea, Torino, Giappichelli, 2022, dal cap. I al cap. IV (the volume, however, retracts and completes the themes expressed during the Course); P. GROSSI, Prima lezione di diritto, Roma-Bari, Laterza, latest edition on the market.

Course features:

Lessons will be held on the basis of normative sources and legal doctrine.

Any information and teaching material can be found on the pages of the Course in <http://moodle2.units.it>.

Exam features:

Non attending students: Oral examination.

Attending students:

Students who have been trained as "attending" will have the opportunity to undertake a test - based on the lectures, the slides provided and the text indicated - immediately after the end of the lessons. Student who will decide not to take advantage of this opportunity, will be able to avail themselves of the program reserved for attending students anyway, may still keep the privileged program for the "attendants" and support the trial, in every ordinary call on a calendar, through an oral interview.

Students who simply need to complete their credits pertaining to this Course are invited to contact the teaching staff who will assign them a reduced program and a set of readings, according to the circumstances of each case. In any case, missing credits are to be integrated into the curriculum all at once, at the time of the oral exam.

Office hours:

It is possible to meet the teaching staff either during the office hours listed in the web page of the Course, or before and after the teaching hours, or by appointment made by e-mail (drossi@units.it).
